Family Memorials in Prose and Verse: Including Selections from the Writings (Classic Reprint)

Theodore James Elmore

It was the original intention of the compiler of this book that it should contain his personal writings only, and the object sought in putting it into printed form was to preserve, in some permanent shape, such pieces as had been written for special occasions of family interest, as well as to afford pleasure to relatives, and such near personal friends, as had courteously and repeatedly expressed themselves as taking a real interest in the emanations from his pen. While the material was in process of collection, he became possessed of the further wish to make it include at least one selection from the writings of each of his brothers and sisters; and a still later outgrowth of this was the desire to place in this permanent form for preservation by the various branches of the family a record of the ancestry, reaching back as far as it could be ascertained with certainty, and including such brief biographical sketches and notes as were attainable. These statistics seem to be meagre, but were collected with care, and are believed to be strictly reliable. The work has been prosecuted amid the pressure of business, at irregular intervals, and with frequent and protracted interruptions, and has not been without its perplexities. Difficult and delicate as the task of writing an autobiography is recognized to be, not less difficult and delicate does it seem to the compiler to offer biographical comments upon his own immediate relatives now in the midst of life's occupations and experiences and still be able to retain the character of an impartial writer, allowing neither his feelings, nor preferences, to alter the reality of light and shadow. Should he fail in this and it is more than probable that he will fail he offers the plea that it was not his intention so to do, and begs, in advance, the kindly judgment of the one to whom injustice may have been done.
